UPDATE YOUR SUMMER WITH RAVINIA’S TICKET CONTESTS
Keep an eye on our social media for information on how you can win free tickets to Ravinia this summer.

Add @raviniafestival on Snapchat to go behind the scenes all summer long! Just “snap” our ghost to add us as a friend.
Welcome to Ravinia and our 2016 summer season! It's likely you’ve already encountered our latest and largest work of art at the grand entrance, the aquatic sculpture Chorus. Acclaimed Chicago sculptor and Ravinia Life Trustee Richard Hunt, who started our sculpture garden 40 years ago, describes it as the perfect addition to Ravinia because the pliability of water as an artistic medium so closely resembles the fluidity of music. We have programmed water-themed music all summer as we dedicate this new water feature that hearkens to the electric fountains that were among the popular attractions at Ravinia when it first opened as an amusement park in 1904.

History is profoundly important to us, especially this season as we celebrate the 80th anniversary of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra’s summer residency at Ravinia. This enviable relationship between two cultural institutions is saturated with remarkable moments that include one of the final public appearances of George Gershwin performing his Rhapsody in Blue (and we have Jeffrey Kahane re-creating that performance on August 3) and the CSO debuts of five conductors who would go on to become music directors of the orchestra, including its current charismatic leader, Riccardo Muti. And, of course, there was the time that an unknown James Levine stepped in as an 11th-hour replacement to lead the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Chorus in Mahler’s Second Symphony at the Women’s Board gala in 1971, beginning a relationship that elevated both his and Ravinia’s identities. Now considered one of the most important conductors America has ever produced, Levine returns for the first time in over two decades on July 23—again to lead Mahler’s Second—for the 50th annual Women’s Board gala, the only concert fundraiser supporting Ravinia and its Reach*Teach*Play education programs. We cannot thank the Women’s Board enough!

The seeds of these education programs were planted by the Women’s Board in the 1960s and have been nurtured by this dedicated group of volunteers, even as R*T*P has been professionalized to reach more than 75,000 people each year in underserved areas of Cook and Lake Counties, particularly in Chicago Public Schools. We’re especially proud of our latest expansion, employing the “El Sistema” immersion model to create the first elementary-school orchestra based at Ravinia. We anticipated that perhaps 50 students from the five schools participating in the program would express interest in this intensive extracurricular program. Instead, more than 200 students signed up, and we were happy to find instruments for them all. Though working together just since last autumn, these Sistema Ravinia students were invited to share their new passion on the main stage of the worldwide Latino television network Telemundo’s Cinco de Mayo festival.
Ravinia's commitment to music education extends to talented young professionals, too, who hone their stagecraft with the world-class artists at our summer conservatory, Ravinia's Steans Music Institute. The RSMI fellows perform throughout the season, including their own headlining concerts on Ravinia's immensely popular $10 BGH Classics series, through which audiences can connect with some of the finest music ever composed in Ravinia's most intimate space, the 450-seat Bennett Gordon Hall, for less than the cost of a movie ticket. And these aspiring musicians, who competed in worldwide auditions for 60 coveted spots, also expose themselves to public scrutiny and challenge akin to the high-wire give-and-takes you'd expect of the television hit The Voice in a series of free master classes, where the same instantaneous transformations happen before your eyes. (The relation is not coincidental; The Voice uses the classical master class as the model for its pop, rock, and country stars' work with the contestants). We also will welcome back more than 20 RSMI alumni for performances as diverse as Garrison Keillor's final live broadcast from Ravinia of A Prairie Home Companion and a presentation of Bartók's complete string quartets.

Among the 80 Ravinia debuts this summer are Diana Ross, Paul Simon, Ms. Lauryn Hill, and eight conductors, four of whom are also making their CSO debuts. And we'll celebrate both the American and Mexican Independence Days at Ravinia this year! On July 4 we'll have performances by jazz giant Chick Corea and Twenty Feet from Stardom star Lisa Fischer, and then on September 17 we'll have a full-fledged festival of Mexican food, art, and music, headlined by Los Tigres del Norte, the world's top Norteño band, and featuring the festival debut of Mariachi Flor de Toloache.

We'll dedicate several concerts to the "complete" works of not only Bartók, but also Haydn, Bach, and Beethoven, including the launch of a three-year cycle of Beethoven's piano sonatas by acclaimed pianist and noted Beethoven scholar and teacher Jonathan Biss. In a season composed of unprecedented 70 percent classical programming, we must honor Allstate for returning for its second year as the Lead Classical Sponsor of Ravinia Festival. Remember that children and students through college are admitted free to the lawn for all classical programming, and most Pavilion seats for all CSO concerts are only $25.

We also salute the other corporations and individual donors who make Ravinia possible. About half the money needed to run the not-for-profit festival comes from ticket sales. The rest comes from these supporters of Ravinia's mission. Our special thanks go to Ravinia's Board of Trustees and Life Trustees, distinguished business leaders and philanthropists who have been overseeing the health and vitality of the festival since 1936. We also thank the young professionals of the Ravinia Associates Board, who just set a fundraising record with their 2016 Music Matters event, honoring Ravinia Life Trustee Dolores Kohl Kaplan. And we thank Dolores, whose foundation has given us the water sculpture Chorus in memory of her late husband Morry Kaplan, who she met at Ravinia. Love, like water, is a source of life.

We thank you for your love of Ravinia, and hope you enjoy the 2016 season.
Regardless of the genre they ultimately become associated with, most musicians worth their salt can cite a varied list of influences that helped create the performer they’ve become. And surely Bonnie Raitt’s list is as eclectic as they come.

Considering the wide array of labels used on her music—from blues to pop, roots to rock—the 10-time Grammy winner and multiplatinum powerhouse could easily teach a course on the history of 20th-century American music. Of course, rather than talk about it, she’d probably rather teach by playing slide guitar and singing. Ravinia audiences can expect to be well schooled September 3, when her Dig in Deep tour arrives at the festival.
DEEP CIRCLE
Undergirding those divergent influences was a foundation that came from having two parents steeped in the arts. Born in 1949 to a Broadway-star father and a pianist-singer mother, Bonnie grew up surrounded by the songs of American musical theater. Known for his booming voice and dashing looks, John Raitt starred in a series of popular shows, including Oklahoma, Carousel, Annie Get Your Gun, and The Pajama Game. Naturally, those compositions were key parts to the soundtrack of her childhood.

It’s easy for Raitt to share fond memories of theater life—especially the times when she and her brothers got to visit their dad for a week each summer while he was touring: “I just remember hanging out backstage, the smell of the makeup and the sound of the orchestra warming up. It was really a thrill. I knew everybody’s parts, not just my dad’s, and all the songs.”

Long categorized by most of her fans as a master of blues, roots, and/or Americana, Raitt began performing when she was just a Radcliffe College student with a guitar. All she wanted was to earn a little extra cash, she says, to “hang out with some blues guys that I really idolized. I didn’t have any plans to do it for a career! That just fell into my lap when I happened to do something that other people weren’t doing, which was playing blues guitar in a way that most women weren’t.”

Meeting those blues legends turned out to be not just personally fulfilling, but the first step in slowly building a lifelong career she says she hadn’t really dreamed about. One year after opening for blues giant Mississippi Fred McDowell at a small New York venue in 1970, Raitt released her first album on Warner Bros. Still, the kind of success that turned her into a household name took nearly two more decades, when the smash-hit album Nick of Time topped the charts and won her the first of her Grammys.

Raitt has no regrets about her career’s slow burn. “I had no interest in worrying about whether my records were hits or not,” she says. “The folk, blues, and roots community—now you can put it in the format of ‘Americana’—isn’t impacted by record sales, or looks, or how old you are. Once you develop your fan base and find critics that like you, as long as you continue to grow and keep doing good music, your fans are going to stay with you.

“I set my sights on the long run and deliberately avoided doing anything that would give me commercial success,” Raitt continues. “For me, to be able to have nine albums and pack 2,000-seat, 3,000-seat places during my 20s and 30s—that’s what I was banking on.”

It was a wise decision in many ways. For one thing, the kind of crazy success she experienced at age 40 with Nick of Time can lead a person in their 20s down a particularly self-destructive path—one that’s only harder to navigate.
for being played out in public. (Raitt gave up alcohol and other drugs in the late 1980s, and she refers to Nick of Time as "her first sober album.") But more than that, her pursuit of her musical passion, rather than commercial success, meant that she could perform with some of her musical heroes, many of them African American and little known to the general public. It’s one of her life’s blessings that she most cherishes.

One of those heroes was the great blues singer Sippie Wallace, whom Raitt met in the early 1970s. “We brought her out of retirement,” Raitt says, “and she toured with me off and on, as well as with her own group, until she was in her late 80s.” The two recorded a duet together before Wallace died in 1986. And there’s also McDowell, the man she regards as one of the world’s greatest slide guitar players. “We were very close, as I was with Sippie,” she says. “We toured a little bit, but he passed away, unfortunately, in 1972, right before I was going to do a duet with him on my second album. But I learned a lot from him. I just adored him.”

Of course, there’s another famed musician, now gone, whom Raitt is grateful to have eventually collaborated with: her father. She recorded three duets with him on his Grammy-nominated 1995 release, Broadway Legend. “I really was thrilled to sing with my dad,” she reminisces.

She mined their complex relationship in her songwriting. “Circle Dance,” from her 1994 release Longing in Their Hearts, addresses the love and the longing, recalling a child’s conflicted feelings about his frequent, career-driven absences. “I played it for him,” she recalls, “and he was quiet for a moment. He was very moved by it. It’s one of those things, as you get older—even if you had a great relationship, as I did, with your parents—you look back and you say, ‘You know, they did the best they could. They could have been this, they could have been that.’ But you get wiser with age, and each decade, you look back at relationships and you see them in a different light than when you were younger.”
Each decade, you look back at relationships and you see them in a different light than when you were younger.

On her new album, “The Ones We Couldn’t Be” returns to a similar emotional well. “It’s as much about my family as it is about romance,” she says. “One verse is about a romantic relationship; the other one is about my family. Regret—about what to do when a relationship goes stale. That’s something that seems relevant whether you’re 21 or 61.”

And if the different kinds of relationships blend in the listener’s mind, that’s okay, too. Raitt notes with a chuckle, “Ironically, Stevie Nicks started performing ‘Circle Dance’ live, and she had no idea it was about my dad. I think she was singing it about Lindsey [Buckingham].”

Perspective and humor, it seems, remain two of Raitt’s trademarks. When asked about her frequent touring, she reveals how much she loves Ravinia, especially after a long spring touring to indoor venues, but she quickly makes another gently self-deprecating joke: “Some of my favorite gigs have been at Ravinia! … That’s just such a celebration, to be able to play under the open sky like that. It can sometimes get super hot and muggy, but you just get used to it. Whatever hair style your hair gets into, at this point, at our age, we’re just glad we have hair.”

Ksenija Sidorova adds to the classical tradition of the accordion

Squeezing Out of the Box

A n hour’s conversation with Ksenija Sidorova flies right on by. The comely, Latvian-born accordion virtuoso may be a darling of the contemporary classical music industry, with appearances in A-list concert halls and, as of this year, a lucrative recording contract with Deutsche Grammophon to her credit, but she is also a refreshingly down-to-earth charmer.

She has a wicked sense of humor, too, especially when conversation turns to her rather off-the-beaten-path choice of instrument. When asked if she hails from a musical family, Sidorova immediately counters, “If my parents were musicians, I doubt I’d play the accordion!” She also adores a satirical cartoon by Gary Larson for The Far Side; in the first frame, an arrival at the pearly gates is greeted with “Welcome to Heaven, here is your harp!” while down below an unfortunate soul is told, “Welcome to Hell. Here is your accordion.” Don’t let the levity fool you, though. Sidorova is a profoundly serious musician who is determined to let the world know that the accordion is not just for polkas anymore.

accordion
Not that it ever was, entirely. Although the accordion has generally been associated with folk traditions, the instrument became all the rage in aristocratic French salons in the mid-1800s. An early concert piece entitled Thème varié très brillant pour accordéon methode Reisner by Louise Reisner, a Parisian accordionist and composer, appeared in 1839. Tchaikovsky incorporated four diatonic accordions into the writing of his Orchestral Suite No. 2 in C Major, Op. 53, and Charles Ives composed an interlude for a chorus of accordions in his Orchestral Set No. 2. The Italian composer Umberto Giordano included accordions in the orchestration for his 1898 opera Fedora. Those who attended Lyric Opera of Chicago’s production of Alban Berg’s Wozzeck last season may have noticed the use of accordion to create an atmosphere of foreboding (not something immediately associated with the instrument) as the feeble antihero Wozzeck is approached by the Fool, who terrifies him by saying he smells like blood.

Still, the accordion may seem an odd choice for the enchanting Sidorova. One might peg her as a flutist, or picture her perched demurely behind a harp. Her journey with the instrument began as a child in her native Riga. “It was a great coincidence this happened. My roots are basically Russian, [but] my mother and father were studying in Latvia. It was before the Berlin Wall came down, so we stayed, and I am quite pleased by that because I consider myself [multilingual]. I don’t have that strong sense of belonging anywhere, and this helps me feel at home in London. [But still] I am Russian, I am Latvian; it is a complicated story.”

As a child, Sidorova spent summers with her grandmother, who played the garmoshka, a folk instrument. “The boys all did sports,” Sidorova recalls, “so she brought this little broken accordion from her neighbor. Some keys were missing, but I learned a couple of songs and basic chords. My parents came at the end of the summer and saw this whole act. They were not impressed: ‘Okay, grandma had her fun, now let’s go to something else.’”

However, Sidorova’s mother sensed that her then-6-year-old daughter’s musical interest was more than a summer diversion, so one day, when passing a music conservatory, she impulsively led her inside. “It was the middle of the term,” Sidorova remembers. They asked me what instrument I wanted to play. I said the accordion. The secretary flipped out. She said, ‘Nobody chooses the accordion.’ But when you are a kid you are fearless. They said I could begin, and if I did not do well I would have to leave at the end of the term. I was there for 10 years.” Sidorova studied with Marije Gasele, who she affectionately calls “my Jewish mother. She took care of me in so many ways and gave me extra lessons. She was excited to work with me because I picked things up very fast. I had a huge responsibility, because the time came to choose a better quality instrument and that cost a lot of money. I had a serious chat with my parents; at the age of 13, we got the instrument. I knew this would be my profession.”

She subsequently recorded a disc of demo material, which fell into the hands of Owen Murray at London’s Royal Academy of Music. Murray invited her to the academy to attend what she thought was a master class. “I was a kid, just 16. My English was not so good as now, [but fortunately] I met someone who spoke Russian. I said I was there for a master class, and they said, ‘No, these are the entrance examinations.’ Owen had filled out an application and invited me for these auditions! I was so nervous, I don’t remember anything. I was accepted with a full scholarship. It was like a fairy tale.”

Sidorova is a profoundly serious musician who is determined to let the world know that the accordion is not just for polkas anymore.
Upon completing her courses, Sidorova longed to remain at the Royal Academy for graduate study but had to face up to a daunting financial problem. Academy regulations prohibited awarding a second scholarship, so in order to fund her advanced education, she embarked upon a grueling series of competitions. This meant going up against some of the most gifted young instrumentalists around—but the girl with the “squeeze box” aced them out, winning 11 of the 13 competitions she entered, earning the Philharmonia Orchestra Martin Musical Scholarship, the Philharmonia Orchestra Friends Award, Italy’s Città di Montese, and a slew of further awards in Latvia, Lithuania, and Russia. In 2009 she won the Friends of the Royal Academy of Music Wigmore Award, which led to her debut in London’s venered Wigmore Hall. “I fixed my name somewhere,” she reflects, “and people heard of me.”

One impressed listener was soprano Felicity Lott, who invited Sidorova to appear on Radio France. “I got a good slot on prime time,” she enthuses, “and then I got this lovely circle of friends!” Sidorova has since collaborated with a number of opera singers, including bass-baritone Bryn Terfel and tenors Juan Diego Flórez and Rolando Villazón. “I had never worked with singers. The way they breathe and phrase is so different from other instrumentalists. It made a huge impact on me. With Juan Diego, we toured a little for his last album.”

She has primarily made her name as a soloist, however, with notable success in the works of Bach, Mozart, and Scarlatti—often performed in her own transcriptions. “People used to play Beethoven’s ‘Emperor’ Concerto on the accordion. [You can practically hear her eyes roll at the idea.] I call this musical por-nography. There is no point in it. We are missing the main idea of what the composer wanted, and cannot give all the variety of colors. I have to be very selective about what works, and what doesn’t.”

To that end, Sidorova has participated in some interesting projects outside the classical realm, and has even recorded for an iPhone game. Inevitably, this has sometimes led to being billed as a “crossover” artist, but she bristles at the term. “Crossover? No. To what? I don’t play covers. I don’t believe in strict borders. If you do what you do with passion, and it is good work, why not? I like many different styles in music. It is very diverse, but I always stay true to my main mission, to keep the accordion face up, at the level where it belongs. It is a truly classical instrument, and all classical musicians have to be diverse.”

That mission has been forged from an amalgam of passion and practicality. “When I was studying, I had to pick up a second instrument and studied piano. Some asked, why didn’t I just become a pianist? There are thousands of pianists! I realized you have to create an identity for yourself. I have a love for this instrument. I wanted to do contemporary things and I love playing the transcriptions. I believe every person creates opportunities for themselves.”
RAVINIA AUDIENCES can sample Sidorova's artistry on August 19 in Bennett Gordon Hall in what promises to be an intriguing concert—a traversal of Bizet's immortal Carmen. The project emerged during the negotiations with Deutsche Grammophon. "They asked what would be a dream project. I thought Carmen's personality rather suits me, in the way of her temperament, her passion, and for standing by the right of free love. I stand by the right of the accordion! The subject is so current, we see it in shows like Sex and the City and Desperate Housewives. Carmen is there in all shapes and forms. The cliché of the accordion is about drunken men playing it, and that is wrong. With Carmen I have this huge rainbow of colors to show the accordion as a very passionate instrument, but also tender and sensitive. I felt I could bring a different voice to it with my multicultural background. My Carmen has a little bit of world music, jazz, some contemporary harmonies. Carmen and I are similar. Plus," she laughs heartily, "I just got married to someone named José!" (Don José is the name of Carmen's lover in Bizet's opera.)

When she isn’t performing, Sidorova loves to cook, and spends hours in the kitchen at home. "I stay in shape. It is about food and gym, that’s my daily routine! It is important to have a balance in life. You are not a machine."

But for the moment, Sidorova is focused on Carmen and her Ravinia debut. "It’s wonderful! I have heard so much of this festival and could never imagine I would one day really be in it! When I saw the lineup, well, it is just an honor. For someone coming to hear this program, don’t think it’s weird, because you will hear wonderful musicians onstage. I want people to come with open ears and heart, because people don’t usually hear the accordion this way.

"I am privileged to be doing what I love doing, which is playing music. And I am very fortunate to perform my music on such an instrument as well."

Richard On
After listening to our favorite artists for hours on end, we can begin to feel a deep connection to them not only as musicians but as the people behind the music. But there's always more than meets the eye—or the ear. Ravinia has asked the artists appearing on its stages this summer some lighthearted questions to get to know them better, and here we'll share some of the answers we received with you.

Ravinia Magazine: What was your first apartment or your first car like?

Richard On: My first car was a silver 1985 Toyota Camry, a.k.a. “Silver Bullet.” It had no power steering, no power windows, and no power locks. I’m surprised it even had a battery. But what it lacked in luxury was made up for by one-of-a-kind, high-tech, top-secret, defensive driving features that were way ahead of their time. For example, its windshield wiper fluid overshot the windshield, creating a very effective anti-tailing system (even more effective on convertibles and motorcyclists). It was also known for its extremely frigid A/C, which would be activated on full blast, with all vents pointing in the direction of any front seat passenger who fell asleep while I was driving, causing them to shiver in agony. These are the only features I can talk about—I’ve already said too much.

Ravinia: Does your instrument have a personal name? If so, what’s the story behind it?

Richard On: My number-one guitar is a 1963 Fender Stratocaster in “Fiesta Red.” Her name is Frieda.

Ravinia: What is the most memorable concert you’ve been to?

Richard On: When I was 13, Marc and I went to see Fugazi at Fort Reno Park in Tenleytown, a neighborhood of Washington, DC. Not knowing what they sounded like or what to expect, we rushed to the front of the stage early and waited for the band to come on. When they hit the stage, they hit it hard. The energy was like nothing I’d ever seen before. Next thing we knew, the packed crowd had begun to sway left and right, and suddenly we were in a full-blown mosh pit. Our 115-pound, 5-foot-4 frames could not handle it, and after being tossed around with no control, we crawled out of that tornado on our hands and knees and watched from a safer distance. It was awesome.

Ravinia: If you were to idly hum a tune, what would it be? Or would you make something up as you go?

Richard On: Whether it’s December, April, or August, I always find myself humming “Let It Snow.” I can’t ever seem to get that jingle out of my damn head.
He's Good

Andy Grammer has become more than a guy with a guitar

Before Andy Grammer made his national debut in 2011, the singer/songwriter/multi-instrumentalist was at turns getting a crash course on entertaining a crowd from his father, Red Grammer (a Grammy-nominated children's recording artist), or busking on the streets of Santa Monica, hoping to be discovered. And once he was, the floodgates of fame flew wide open, from the platinum-selling smash “Keep Your Head Up” and its equally contagious follow-up “Fine by Me,” to tour dates alongside the likes of Train, Gavin DeGraw, Colbie Caillat, Plain White T’s, Natasha Bedingfield, Mat Kearney, and Parachute.

That rocket-like ascension kept right on going with the 2014 release of Magazines or Novels, the gold-selling collection that spawned the radio romp “Honey, I’m Good” (now a triple-platinum seller) and fellow airwave dominator “Good to be Alive (Hallelujah).” Add in a turn on 2015’s Dancing with the Stars, a surprise appearance at Soldier Field during Taylor Swift’s enormous 1989 tour, plus mounds of solo appearances, and Grammer is unquestionably the breakout star of the decade thus far. The shooting star took a moment to come down to Earth for a lively phone conversation about returning to Ravinia on August 26.

and 27 with Train, building on his unique status as the only nonclassical artist to have made two different tour appearances in a single season—in 2012, first with DeGraw and Caillat, then with Train and Kearney—at the festival in its more than 100 year history.

How would you describe the growth of your audience from those first shows through today?

The growth has been unbelievable, man. I started as a street performer, so the difference between begging someone to stop and take a listen to having Ravinia-sized crowds has really been probably one of the coolest parts of my life.

So Ravinia feels like a home away from home at this point?

Of course. Yeah. There’s something cool about pulling up in the bus and knowing where everything is. You know where catering is and [already have] a sense of how this goes.

You famously took a lap around Ravinia's lawn at your first show here. Is there something about the vibe that’s bringing you back?

I think everybody just really enjoys coming out for a great day. The music is hopefully what brings everybody, but there’s a sense of community once you’re there, [especially on the lawn]. I’ve played a lot of places around the country and Ravinia has its own vibe. I think that people show up knowing what that is and they usually get it. My job is to deliver it and make sure that everybody freaks out.

What’s going to be similar or different this round for you?

[There’s of course] different music, and I’ve got a couple different band members and we move around a lot more than we did last time. I don’t know if it was from the Dancing with the Stars stuff or just kind of how it’s morphed. The shows are even more interactive than it was last time.

How would you describe your sound and show for the first-timers this summer?

I would say to first timers that at my heart I’m a singer-songwriter. I write all my music, but it’s definitely not a show where you come and see a guy stand with a guitar and just sing you his songs. We have a loop pedal, I play trumpet, I play piano, I beatbox a ton, I have a vocoder; we do a ton of, like, old Motown dance moves and we really try to keep the energy up. It starts at the core of a song and then we kind of try to blow it up from there.

You’ve never seemed shy about dancing and working choreography into your shows and videos. How do you feel you did on Dancing with the Stars?

I think I did okay. It was definitely a very difficult experience. It was super fun, but I think the only reason I made it so far was because I’m pretty intense and competitive, so I stayed very late and put everything I had into it. I got a perfect score one night, but it was [still] really tough. Whenever anybody ever asks me about it, I can’t just say “fun” without being like “and the hardest thing I’ve ever done.” It was both of those things.

What was it like jumping in to the TV world?

It’s really intense pressure. I’ve dealt with pressure [like] doing a TV performance or singing “The Star-Spangled Banner,” but that’s something I understand and know. When it comes down to something a little outside my wheelhouse, like ballroom dancing, the pressure is even more intense. So I think I learned and gained some pressure steps, which is pretty cool.

Below: Andy Grammer runs back into the Pavilion after checking out how big his Ravinia audience truly was. Right: Even Grammer’s band wanted to capture a memory of the singer-songwriter’s 2012 Ravinia debut.
Back five or ten years ago, music seemed so much more segmented, where you were pop, country, rock, soul, or whatever the case may be. How has the trend towards a more shuffle-like mentality or genre cross-pollination contributed to your diversity?

I think that the listener base is very diverse. We’re all listening to a lot of different music. It’s so much easier to listen to anything you want at any moment, and I think the listener’s ear has gotten more sophisticated and open to these kinds of mixtures that make [the music] really sweet. As a creator, it’s really an exciting time.

What’s your method to songwriting?

There’s no method that I go to every single time. I usually start with something on the piano or the guitar… something beautiful or exciting or just in the music. And then that can kind of lend itself to what needs to be said, or I can have a whole list of ideas I’m going through. I’ll think Those words are really cool or This emotion would make for a cool song, then, when I sit down at the piano or guitar, find out which ones fit the best together.

Magazines or Novels is still a red-hot record, but have you been able to carve out any time to write since it’s been released?

I’ve been writing probably the last six months, and we just might have a new little something to play when we come through. I can’t tell you what the name of it is, but we’ll definitely have a new single by the time [I’m onstage] and we’ll be on the verge of putting out a bunch of new stuff. It’s a really exciting time.

Did you expect Magazines to have this long of a shelf life?

It’s been really wonderful, man. You never plan for success like this. It’s so sweet ’cause you put in so much energy and time. I wrote over a hundred songs for that album and I picked my favorites. The fact that those are actually having their due time in the spotlight makes me really happy.

“Honey, I’m Good” has been all over pop radio and really all of pop culture over the past couple of years. Has it been a blessing or a curse or a little bit of both?

I think just a blessing. It’s been amazing. What’s cool is that I’ve been able to put out such different types of music and a lot of it’s working, so I don’t feel too constrained. If you listen to the album, that’s probably one of the weirder ones in almost a little bit of a country/pop mold. There’s not a whole lot else on the album that’s like that. But then what’s been so cool is to have the success of “Good to Be Alive” follow, which is a little more like the James Brown element. It really opened me up on my third album to just be kind of like “anything goes” and play whatever I want.

Is there anything you can tell us about “Honey, I’m Good” that we don’t already know?

For me it was the first one that I couldn’t get away from, which is a pretty crazy feeling. You’d be on the highway driving to get a coffee and someone drives by and they’re playing it and then you’d go into the supermarket and it’s playing there, too. It was a pretty surreal experience, and I’m super grateful for it.

You also sang the song as a surprise guest at Taylor Swift’s Chicago show last summer. How did that connection come about?

She’s so cool. She tweeted one time when “Keep Your Head Up” came out that she really dug the song. It was so cool, got all this press, and really helped me out. Then she brought me on stage in Nashville to sing “Keep Your Head Up,” which is when I first met her. She’s just been super generous and incredible. So then when she did her next tour and was bringing all these different artists, “Honey, I’m Good” was doing well and she brought me up to sing that one. It was super special. She had those wristbands and turned them all yellow for the song. It was awesome.

Man, what was that like seeing more than 50,000 people lose their minds at Soldier Field?
It was pretty awesome, man! It’s an amazing experience and it’s like being in an incredible hotel. It’s like every once in a while someone will put you up in a suite at the Westin, like Dude, this is really nice!

If I’m not mistaken, you once told Eric and Kathy from 101.9 FM “The Mix” about getting out of a traffic ticket thanks to your fame. What other opportunities or perks has your celebrity given you that weren’t the case before?

Yeah, that was early on with “Keep Your Head Up.” I was pulled over by a female cop, and then once I started singing the song, she let me off. It was pretty sweet. Just today the guy that was checking us in at baggage recognized me—my bag was overweight, but he let it go. The little perks of a good song!

Does this all beat busking on the streets? Or did that world have its own set of colorful characters and stories that you might miss now?

You know, it’s really funny. I have a song about it on my first album, called the “Biggest Man in Los Angeles,” and at that moment, it was the best thing ever. I’d never really had crowds of 40 people stop and cheer when I was done with one of my original songs. Now the crowds are bigger and the stage is bigger and there’s more going on, but there’s a through line that’s super similar. So it’s hard to say which one is better or worse. They both just seem like part of the same story.

Does anybody ever come up and say, “I saw you on the corner of such-and-such”?

Yeah, all the time! And they pull out the CD [from those days].

What’s cool about Santa Monica is it’s a travel destination, so a lot of people from across the country go on vacation there. So I’ll be driving through Kansas, I’ll play a show and someone will come up with a CD they bought on the street and say, “We saw you on Harrison Street.” I will say that it’s been really sweet to have started like that, because it’s a very grounding thing to have started playing for five to ten people.

When things happen that might seem annoying in your current situation, you always have it to [remind you to] chill out. Having put in a lot of time in that environment makes where I am now even better.

Even before all that, how did singing alongside your dad when you were a kid prepare you for what you’re doing now?

I learned a lot from having him around all the time, like the hustle of songwriting. That’s kind of the center of everything. What makes a show great is when everyone connects to these songs. I think sometimes [when listening to music] we get lost in the artist and production, but to me it all comes back to What are the songs? If you have enough songs that everybody can sing along to, you’re going to have a great show, and I kind of learned that from my dad.

What’s next for Andy Grammer?

This tour is going to be great, there will be a new single released, and it’s like chapter three, man. We’re figuring out merch over here, we’ve got a new set list, and we’ve got a big television appearance coming up. You’re catching me right as I’m walking out to the diving board, and it’s really exciting!

Benny Goodman was a man for the history books. His reputation in the world of jazz is well traversed and appropriately revered, from assembling and touring with one of the earliest racially integrated bands to bringing swing into the world of “serious” music in 1938, first at Carnegie Hall, and just a few months later, at Ravinia. Before that already astounding year ended, he did what fans of either jazz or classical music must have thought unthinkable. Goodman teamed with the great Budapest String Quartet to record Mozart’s Clarinet Quintet, K. 581, for RCA Red Seal (right) and began giving public classical recitals, often with that very same ensemble and masterpiece. Three years later, the quintet made a stop at Ravinia, marking the clarinetist’s only classical performance at the festival, but an appropriately impactful one. By then it had become one of his signature pieces, right up there with countless expressions of jazz. But Goodman wasn’t satisfied with just one ace up his sleeve; he had begun adding to the solo clarinet repertoire, commissioning Béla Bartók for the trio Contrasts (and recording it with the composer at the piano; bottom right) as well as concertos from Aaron Copland, Paul Hindemith, and Malcolm Arnold, and a sonata by Francis Poulenc, the composer’s penultimate work. Goodman also became closely associated with Leonard Bernstein’s Prelude, Fugue, and Riffs and Igor Stravinsky’s Ebony Concerto, recording both of those works among many other historic and contemporary masterpieces for the clarinet, including those of Brahms, Weber (bottom left), Debussy, and Nielsen.
Los Tigres del Norte are very, very big. Really big. Let’s say they are the Mexican Rolling Stones. That big.

It’s hard to say when Los Tigres del Norte became more famous than the characters they sing about in their fabled corridos. What’s certain is that in a marketplace overflowing with norteño bands, Los Tigres are the undisputed kings of the genre; a group that’s recorded more than 30 albums and sold millions of copies over an astounding career of four decades and counting. But despite their multiple Grammy nomina-
Day weekend celebration. Considered the godfathers of norteño, Los Tigres—comprising musical director, lead singer, and accordionist Jorge Hernández, his brothers Hernán, Eduardo, and Luis, and his cousin Oscar Lara—have a solid position as standard bearers of Latino music, taking all the northern folklore and mixing it with true stories of social injustice, both past and present. Their lyrics, full of social consciousness, have given millions of people a lens to the past, present, and future.

And if everything they sing about rings true, that’s because it is true. “Since the beginning of our career, we’ve sung what people live, what’s currently happening,” bass player Hernán Hernández says. “And the audience themselves gives us the stories. They’re the ones who say, ‘Sing about this. No one else dares to do so.’ ”

One of their most daring songs is “José Pérez León,” a hauntingly arranged corrido about a young man who suffocates inside a truck as he attempts to cross from Mexico into the United States. The song directly references an October 2003 case in which 16 immigrants suffocated inside a truck in Texas. In “La Bala” (“The Bullet”), they address the tragedy of so many Latino and African-American neighborhoods ravaged by drug-related gang violence. There’s also “Las Mujeres de Juárez,” which pointedly criticizes government and police inaction surrounding the unsolved brutal murders of over 300 women in the border city of Ciudad Juárez since 1993. “We wanted the families of these women to be heard,” Hernández says.

“Jaula de Oro” (1986) speaks of life in a “golden cage” representing the United States, where immigrants enjoy economic progress but their children often forget their culture and their roots. It is not often that issues of this complexity find a place in 21st-century pop music. “Maybe a song can't resolve a problem, but you can at least let people know about what's not being done. More people will listen to a song than will read a newspaper,” Hernández says. However, Los Tigres’ activism has sometimes come up against the establishment, and some of their most critical songs have been banned altogether from Mexican radio.

They definitely are the most respected norteño group. The corrido is a type of very simple narrative ballad dating back to Mexican Independence. Corridos usually deal with historic figures, such as Miguel Hidalgo, a hero of the Mexican Independence, or General Pancho Villa, a hero of the Mexican Revolution of 1910. Los Tigres, however, give them a twist, daring to speak on subjects that other people wouldn’t touch, such as gang violence, jobs, education, or even gender issues.

The daring comes in part from Los Tigres’ own experience. In 1968, brothers Hernández left their village of Rosa Morada, in the state of Sinaloa, Mexico, and went to the United States in hope of providing support for their family. The story goes that the group’s name came about from an immigration officer calling them “young little tigers” as they were crossing the border between California and Mexico, and as they headed north, the name “Los Tigres del Norte” was adopted upon their settling in San Jose, the city they still call home. In those days, Raúl Hernandez was a formal member of the group in place of the younger Luis, but otherwise the family band’s lineup has changed little over the intervening decades. Jorge, the eldest brother, was only 14 at the time, but he was confident they could hold their own in gigs in California. As they had hoped, the boys found that the pay was better north of the border, and they were able to start sending money back home to their father, who had suffered a farming accident that left him permanently disabled.

As Los Tigres made the rounds in the early 1970s, music entrepreneur Art Walker encountered them while listening on the radio to a live performance from Parque de las Flores, where the Mexican community used to gather on Sundays, and he quickly took them under his wing, signing them to his independent record label, Discos Fama. Their big break came in 1972 when they recorded “Contrabando y Traición,” the tale of a fearless drug dealer called Camelia la Tejana. Listeners fell in love with the gun-wielding Camelia, and Los Tigres were suddenly famous.
Los Tigres soon found out that they weren’t only cut out for entertaining. In 1978, the group recorded “Vivan los Mojados” (“Long Live the Wetbacks”), their first song dealing with the plight of undocumented immigrants. The song, they reflect, was a turning point.

The musicians never imagined that people would look at them as spokesmen, as the people who would say what no one dared to say. But suddenly they were going to interviews, and people were writing that they were the voice of the silent people.

Being overtly political isn’t Los Tigres’ aim, nor has it ever been. The group’s choice of song subjects seems to be driven by their fan base, which is largely made up of immigrants, like Los Tigres themselves. To that point, Los Tigres don’t write their own songs, instead commissioning many of them, based on what the fans request.

Sometimes Los Tigres have gone so far as to record tracks that fans have handed over to them as cassettes during shows. In this way they stay uniquely in tune with their audience, and it has worked out. They’re the most popular Spanish-language group in the US, and what makes Los Tigres so effective is that often what they’re doing is just describing the way things are. A lot of their songs are about the travails of the working class. The listener can take it as something political or as an accurate description of the way the majority of the people in this country experience their day-to-day lives.

Los Tigres’ influence goes well beyond the US and Mexico. Most surprising has been the group’s newfound popularity in Spain. There, best-selling author Arturo Pérez Reverte wrote his hit novel La Reina del Sur based on the group’s depiction of Camelia la Tejana. A year later, Los Tigres returned the favor, titling their 2003 album La Reina del Sur and touring Spain for the first time. A successful telenovela followed.

“I like the stories,” says bandleader Jorge Hernández, talking about his penchant for corridos. “Whether the protagonist is good or bad, it speaks the truth. It has character, strength.”

Los Tigres are largely credited with popularizing “narco-corridos,” tales of the drugs, blood, and money that have made headline news for decades now. In Los Tigres’ hands, the genre found new respect. In such mega-hits as “Jefe de jefes” (“Boss of All Bosses”), they are still describing a drug lord, but instead of exalting the character and his “feats,” as many norteño bands do, they take an impartial, distant approach, almost like out of a play by Bertolt Brecht.

Appreciation for Los Tigres has transcended the boundaries of norteño music. They are the only Mexican band of regional music that has been honored by rock bands, writers, poets, visual artists, and scholars alike. In 2001, Latin rock’s top bands assembled to record El Más Grande Homenaje a Los Tigres del Norte, a collection of rock renditions of Tigres songs, and the following year, Los Tigres’ history was part of Corrido Sin Fronteras, an itinerant exhibit put together by the Smithsonian Institution.

It did not come as a surprise when two iconic Mexican acts—Maná, the most beloved pop-rock band in the Spanish-speaking world, and Los Tigres del Norte—joined forces during last fall’s Latin Grammy Awards to make a statement about the unprecedented power of the Latino vote in the upcoming 2016 US election. Performing Los Tigres’ norteño anthem “Somos Más Americanos” (“We Are More American”), Maná and Los Tigres reaffirmed the fact that the Latino vote matters. At the end of the song, the musicians unveiled a sign that read, “Latinos, united, don’t vote for the racists.”

Beyond mere words, however, Los Tigres routinely put their money where their mouth is. Most impressive of all has been their contribution to create the Los Tigres del Norte Foundation for the preservation and support of traditional Mexican and Mexican-American music forms. The actions and the songs are an integral part of who Los Tigres del Norte are: “It’s part of what we can give because we know someone will listen; maybe we sing what the people want to tell their government. We know the sacrifice it entails to come here. And we do believe that more artists, more bands should pay a little bit more attention to these issues, because there are many things that don’t get done or resolved because those of us who can make a difference don’t do anything.” For all their fame and fortune, they’re still a group of brothers who crossed the border in search of a better life.

Everything may be bigger in Texas, and our immediate neighbor to the south, Kentucky, may be the “Bluegrass State,” but you can’t get much bigger in bluegrass than Illinois native Alison Krauss. Before she was out of her teens, the fiddler had won several fiddling competitions, was named the “Most Promising Fiddler in the Midwest” by the Society for the Preservation of Bluegrass in America, had released two albums on the big-time indie label Rounder Records, and won her first Grammy Award (at the time, she was the second-youngest winner ever in any Grammy category). Just under a month after she turned 25, Krauss made her Ravinia debut backed by her nearly omnipresent collaborators, Union Station (right). Since contributing to the multiple Grammy-winning soundtrack to O Brother, Where Art Thou? (and being further credited with reviving America’s interest in bluegrass music), she’s made special guest appearances with a remarkable variety of artists, from Joshua Bell to Taylor Swift, as well as with Robert Plant on their Album of the Year Grammy-winning duet album, Raising Sand, which they performed together at Ravinia in 2008 (below).
ANY ARTIST SHOULD BE SO LUCKY to have one song in their career that people still want to hear,” singer-musician Seal intoned in a 2015 interview with Details magazine.

He was, of course, speaking of “Kiss from a Rose,” the multimillion-selling, triple Grammy-winning pop hit from the soundtrack of the 1995 film Batman Forever that changed his life. Ironically, it was also a song that he had tossed aside years earlier, long before the release of his first album in 1991, calling the tune “an embarrassment.”

That was, until British record producer (and longtime Seal collaborator) Trevor Horn turned the song into the hauntingly romantic, albeit mysterious charmer that captivated listeners the moment Seal’s creamy vocals uttered, “There used to be a greying tower alone on the sea / You became the light on the dark side of me.”

The meaning of the song’s lyrics continues to confound music fans more than 20 years later. But what is not confounding is Seal’s global success in the music business, thanks to a voice that is as gorgeous and lush as it is instantly recognizable.
Born Seal Henry Olusegun Olumide Adeola Samuel to parents of Nigerian and Brazilian descent, the singer’s early career became infused with the soul, funk, and house music that permeated his London upbringing. And though he tooled around Japan and Asia with various funk and blues bands in the mid-1980s, it was his vocals on the techno hit “Killer” by fellow Brit/record producer Adamski in 1990 that kickstarted his singing career. (Seal would rerecord the tune for his debut album one year later.)

Breezily traversing everything from pop to blues to the aforementioned soul and funk, Seal’s subsequent work with Horn, including the hit single “Crazy” from the debut Seal and “Prayer for the Dying” from his second eponymous album, continued his superstar trajectory as a singer-songwriter. Further releases—the David Foster–produced Soul in 2008, as well as the Horn-helmed Soul 2 in 2011 and 7 in 2015—demonstrate the far reaches of his vocal prowess. With 7, the singer-songwriter delivered a most intimate portrait of love with all its complicated, maddening, blissful layers. “My attempt and duty as an artist is to help people feel,” Seal said about the album’s intent.

The 53-year-old singer is in the midst of his greatest hits tour, which arrives at Ravinia on August 28. In a recent e-mail interview from Europe for Ravinia magazine, Seal discussed his career, his acting debut, and the one thing about Chicago he simply can’t resist.

What can fans look forward to with the new tour?

The new tour has a new sound, and I’m very excited about it. I have reworked some of the classics to make it a real dance party. My fans are the best. I want each of them to have a spectacular time. I’m not afraid to play everyone’s favorites, like “Kiss from a Rose” — that’s what got me here, and I’m grateful [people still enjoy those songs].

What’s it like to revisit the hits? Are there any songs in particular that you really look forward to performing every night?

I have some covers I’ve added to the set. One of my favorites [comes from] Hall & Oates, as they were such an inspiration and one of the reasons for me becoming a musician.

What led to your recent impromptu street performance in Montreal? Is busking something you enjoy? What was it about this musician that made you want to join in?

It’s a hobby of mine to take pictures. As I was roaming the streets, I saw the busker and thought to myself, We are both musicians, what’s the difference between him and I? Luck? It was such an amazing moment, [so] I decided to continue with this throughout my tour this summer, finding unknown talent in small cities across the globe. #Streetsong was born.

So you plan on looking for a busker while you’re in the Chicago area?

We will have to just see, shall we? Chicago is a wonderful city with many hidden gems.

Any favorite places in Chicago you like to visit?

Wherever the deep dish pizza is, you’ll find me.
What was it like to cross over into acting for the first time earlier this year, portraying Pontius Pilate in the live broadcast of Tyler Perry’s The Passion? Your “Mad World” was one of the highlights.

It was a very surreal experience. I have sung and performed live over half my life, but to take on a new task like acting was quite invigorating.

Let’s talk about your most recent film appearance, in Judd Apatow’s Popstar, and the wolves in the sequence you’re featured in. How “vicious” were those dogs—or were they truly wolves?

Filming Popstar was great fun! The wolves were actually real wolves, and when one started howling they all joined in. I think one of them might even have been Ghost from Game of Thrones!

Do you channel a different part of yourself when acting versus singing?

Yes, it’s a very different part of the brain you have to tap into. I received some of the best advice from William H. Macy while I was [doing] promos for The Passion and it really helped!

With the release of 7, you returned to a lineup of completely original songs. Can you talk about the genesis of that project and what you wanted to accomplish with the new album?

I worked on this album with a dear friend, Trevor Horn. Many people would like to think the album is autobiographical, but it plays off many other people’s experiences and emotions. Trevor and I have both experienced losses of different kinds. I tried to capture the highs, the lows, the recklessness, the anger, the remorse.

Growing up, were your earliest musical influences primarily British bands or from the global stage?

Both. There are groups like Hall & Oates that have had such an impact on me, as well as specific songs, like “Imagine” by John Lennon, that have a huge place in my heart. Two standouts are Stevie Wonder and Prince.

What did the sudden passing of Prince mean to you?

[The death of] Prince was a huge hit to me. I didn’t want to believe it for days. Growing up, my brother and friends lived off of his music. He was one of a kind. A true icon.

What was the best advice you got about a career in music, and from whom?

I’ve had such an amazing career and have been so blessed, [let me turn the tables]. If I could give advice to anyone it would be to slow down and really appreciate everything that comes your way.

Ravinia’s Steans Music Institute, the festival’s summer conservatory for young professional classical and jazz musicians, opened in 1988 and is one of the world’s most sought-after summer study programs. RSMI has hosted outstanding young musicians from over 65 countries to study and perform with an internationally renowned faculty of artist-teachers.

RSMI alumni regularly garner professional honors and recognition around the world. In the past year, alumni have won a Grammy Award, three Avery Fisher Career Grants, the Metropolitan Opera National Council and Young Concert Artists International Auditions, the American Jazz Pianist Competition, and the Herb Alpert Young Jazz Composer Award. RSMI musicians also appear as orchestral soloists and recitalists worldwide and are members of the world’s finest orchestras, chamber ensembles, opera companies, and the faculties of major universities and conservatories.

Miriam Fried leads a group of recent alumni on a performance tour each spring, including this performance on Ravinia’s $10 BGH Classics series in Bennett Gordon Hall.
The invaluable instruction and performance opportunities provided by Ravinia's Steans Music Institute are only possible because of generous donors. Relying directly on contributions from these dedicated supporters to fund these vital programs, RSMI provides its participants with everything they need—from practical housing and meals to priceless lessons with the world's greatest musicians—so that they can focus fully on their craft. By removing financial considerations, Ravinia affords RSMI participants an opportunity to learn from the world's best pedagogues at a critical time in their career development. In addition to annual support, RSMI relies heavily on its endowment to make these important programs possible. Over 75,000 people are served through Ravinia’s REACH*TEACH*PLAY programs each year. Our programs are designed to educate, foster diverse audience involvement, and ensure that underserved populations have access to live music experiences in their communities and at Ravinia.

REACH

Programs that extend Ravinia’s REACH and bring the joy of music to thousands throughout the Chicago area

TEACH

Programs that TEACH the foundations of music and allow children to express themselves creatively

PLAY

Programs that encourage students to PLAY and experience music throughout their lives

In October 2015, REACH*TEACH*PLAY celebrated the launch of a new Sistema Ravinia program for elementary school students in Lake County. Sistema Ravinia is an intensive orchestral training initiative that fosters social development through exceptional music instruction. The students of this new orchestra performed at Telemundo’s Cinco de Mayo festival in Cicero, IL, on May 7.
A music and dance performance of Ravinia's 2016 One Score, One Chicago selection, Stravinsky's The Firebird, at Hale Elementary School in Chicago as part of the Guest Artists in the Classroom program.

Ravinia Jazz Scholars and RSMI alumnus Marquis Hill performs in Bennett Gordon Hall. Through REACH*TEACH*PLAY, over 1,000 high-school students receive jazz instruction and mentoring each year.

A young girl enjoys KidsLawn, a musical activity space that allows children and families to explore music in fun and interactive ways. The Opportunity Lawn Pass Program provides free lawn tickets to social service agencies, whose constituents would otherwise not be able to attend Ravinia concerts.

Chicago Public School students and their teachers perform onstage in Ravinia's Martin Theatre, demonstrating what they've learned through the Music Discovery Program.

Violin students perform at the Ravinia Lawndale Family Music School, which provides tuition-free music classes to residents of the underserved North Lawndale neighborhood in Chicago.

Chicago Public School teachers perform together at the culmination of a three day Professional Development Institute.
The donors listed below generously contributed to Ravinia’s REACH*TEACH*PLAY education programs between October 1, 2014, and July 15, 2016. The list includes donors to such initiatives as the Music Discovery Program, Guest Artists in the Classroom, Jazz Scholars, and Sistema Ravinia, which reach thousands of underserved Chicago Public School and Lake County students each year. SISTEMA RAVINIA

Sistema Ravinia would not be possible without the foresight of the Ravinia Women’s Board and the funders who have joined them in supporting this project. Ravinia wishes to thank the Women’s Board for this foresight and contributions toward this program; The Negaunee Foundation, for its endowed support of Ravinia’s REACH*TEACH*PLAY programs in Lake County, including the Sistema Ravinia: Harza Nucleo; and the Samuel S. and Dorothy R. Haber Foundation for its endowment dedicated to the Sistema Ravinia: Harza Nucleo.
Every year, Ravinia plays host to the beauty of nature, the joy of great music, and the harmony of satisfied audiences. We owe this, of course, to nature’s cooperation and the talent of the performers, but we also recognize the generosity of our sponsors, whose support helps us to bring these performers to Ravinia and keep admission prices low. Corporate, foundation and individual sponsors have contributed to bring you almost every performance this season, and we salute their ongoing efforts to support the many performing arts institutions we enjoy in Chicago.

Midtown Athletic Clubs

According to my sister, everyone needs a library card and a membership to a health club. Sound mind, sound body. To that I’d add, everyone needs a little Ravinia in the summer. Growing up within blocks of Ravinia, I loved the music I heard on summer afternoons as the musicians rehearsed for each night’s performance. The music helped shape the community and brought friends together on summer nights. At Midtown Athletic Clubs, we’re committed to creating places that bring family and friends together to work out, swim, play tennis, play basketball, dine, shop, relax, and socialize with friends. Our clubs promote and support our members’ active, healthy lifestyles and are engaging communities of fun people. Located in Bannockburn, Chicago, Palatine, and Willowbrook, they are sports resorts right here at home. As a sponsor, Midtown takes pride in supporting the Ravinia community as an extension of our belief that active, social people lead happier, healthier lives.

SALUTE TO SPONSORS

AUGUST 16, 2016 – MAY 13, 2017 | RAVINIA MAGAZINE

In Memory of Howard A. Stotler
We are so very fortunate to have such a great summer festival for the city of Chicago and its surrounding neighbors; the quality of the programming and its leadership have brought us a wide range of great talent for our summer enjoyment. Howard was very happy to have participated in bringing the efforts of Ravinia to the public.
— Nancy and Bruce Payne

Ravinia Women's Board
Since 1962 the Women's Board has promoted Ravinia through a wide range of initiatives, from enhancing audiences' enjoyment of the festival experience to furthering appreciation of music and the arts to educating young performers, gifted or simply enthusiastic. This broad-based mission of the Women's Board is accomplished through highly successful fundraising and the commitment of its dynamic volunteers. Our two major fundraisers, Ravinia Gifts and the annual summer Gala, continue to successfully support our mission.

On July 23 the Women's Board looks forward to celebrating both our 50th Gala and the return of Maestro James Levine, who shared his love of music with Ravinia audiences for over 20 years, both as a guest conductor and as our music director from 1973 to 1993. He returns to the podium to lead the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Chorus in Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony—the same program he conducted in his Ravinia debut 45 years ago. Contributions toward this event help fund Ravinia's Reach*Teach*Play education programs, serving over 75,000 individuals throughout the Chicago area. The Women's Board is also proud to sponsor the August 12 concert featuring Chris Botti and Joshua Bell.

The concert on July 16 is given in memory of Harry Bernbaum and our daughter Keren-Or Bernbaum. They were both avid music lovers. Keren was a mezzo-soprano, singing in opera and French art song recitals; Harry was just avid. Ravinia has been in our lives for as far back as I can remember. It is a gem in Chicago's cultural crown, and it should be our legacy to support its future, not just for classical music, but all of the many genres that are produced during the festival season. Just do it! For your children and grandchildren. We are so proud of Ravinia's long and accomplished history.

Wintrust is proud to support Ravinia and the joy it brings to so many during the summer season. Wintrust Community Banks have more than 150 locations around Chicago, southern Wisconsin, and northwest Indiana, including in Lake Forest, Highland Park, Northbrook, Wilmette, Chicago, and Schaumburg. At a Wintrust Community Bank, you get the resources of a big bank with the exceptional service and community focus that can only come from a local community bank.

In Memory of Keene H. Addington II

The Keene H. Addington II memorial concert fund was established in 1995 in memory of Keene Addington, a former board member and dedicated supporter of Ravinia. A lifelong resident of the Chicago area and an energetic leader in both business and civic duties, Keene was passionate about Ravinia and its role in bringing world-class music to the Chicago area. Prior to his death, Keene was Campaign Chairman and Trustee for Designs for the Future: Magnifying Ravinia’s Magic, a major funding initiative in which he was a driving force behind its inception and success. As in all his endeavors, Keene Addington approached his participation in the Ravinia Festival with energy and determination. The Keene H. Addington II memorial fund is proud to participate in the ongoing support of Ravinia.

In Honor of Sandra K. Crown

Sandy has always believed that “the arts are the implicit language of peace in the world, with Ravinia the shining star.” When she was chairman of the Ravinia Women’s Board, the board began to fundraise. Her children worked with her and the board when it started the Friendship Booth, which evolved into the Ravinia Gift Shop. Her children chose to honor her with a very generous gift to the endowment fund in perpetuity. This gift helps support the August 17 concert performance of You’re The Top: Cole Porter’s 125th Birthday Celebration with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Ravinia was the first to highlight American Classic Music Theater, followed by the Lyric Opera of Chicago and the Goodman Theatre.

A lifelong resident of the Chicago area and an energetic leader in both business and civic duties, Keene was passionate about Ravinia and its role in bringing world-class music to the Chicago area. Prior to his death, Keene was Campaign Chairman and Trustee for Designs for the Future: Magnifying Ravinia’s Magic, a major funding initiative in which he was a driving force behind its inception and success. As in all his endeavors, Keene Addington approached his participation in the Ravinia Festival with energy and determination. The Keene H. Addington II memorial fund is proud to participate in the ongoing support of Ravinia.

In Honor of Sandra K. Crown

Sandy has always believed that “the arts are the implicit language of peace in the world, with Ravinia the shining star.” When she was chairman of the Ravinia Women’s Board, the board began to fundraise. Her children worked with her and the board when it started the Friendship Booth, which evolved into the Ravinia Gift Shop. Her children chose to honor her with a very generous gift to the endowment fund in perpetuity. This gift helps support the August 17 concert performance of You’re The Top: Cole Porter’s 125th Birthday Celebration with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Ravinia was the first to highlight American Classic Music Theater, followed by the Lyric Opera of Chicago and the Goodman Theatre.

Juilliard String Quartet on June 27 and Vladimir Feltsman on August 8.

Is proud to support Ravinia, particularly this summer’s performances by Miss Cheney, a lifelong resident of the Chicago area, was particularly interested in artistic, cultural, and educational organizations and supported many such institutions during her lifetime. The foundation is proud to support Ravinia, particularly this summer’s performances by Juilliard String Quartet on June 27 and Vladimir Feltsman on August 8.

In 2016, we celebrate the opening of an aquatic sculpture, which welcomes visitors at Ravinia’s grand entrance and hearkens back to the park’s 1904 opening, when visitors enjoyed several fountains around the park. Our new sculpture is called Chorus and to celebrate it we have programmed several water-themed concerts in the season, including the Chicago premiere of Tan Dun’s Water Passion, Handel’s Water Music, and Debussy’s La mer. We hope that people will find beauty in the music and the sculpture, seeing their love and joy reflected in the dancing notes and waters.

Another chorus we’ll unveil is in honor of the late, great Robert Shaw. As a kid, I sang in choruses, often with music arranged by him. Later, I had the great fortune to witness Shaw’s MASS series in San Francisco and understood that I was in the presence of a master musician who profoundly touched everyone lucky enough to attend his performances. Little did I know that this great conductor, this great American, this champion of civil and human rights who toured courageously through the South at the height of segregation with his Chorale populated with African Americans, would someday be my mentor in things musical and in life. In this, his 100th birthday year, Ravinia celebrates Robert Shaw’s legacy through programs and artists he loved, inspired, even willed into existence. We hope you will join us on June 15 for a special evening as we share a new documentary film about Shaw’s life called Man of Many Voices, followed by a performance of one of Shaw’s signature works, Rachmaninoff’s “Vespers.”

In 130 performances over 100 days, Ravinia transforms 36 acres on Chicago’s North Shore into one of the cultural capitals of the world. We are honored to have our name associated with this great institution.

Joan Wing and Family, in Memory of Jack Wing
Thoughts of summer at Ravinia make my winters in Chicago much more bearable. I was introduced to Ravinia by good friends shortly after we moved to the area, and it is my favorite thing. The venue, the personnel, the people, and the facilities are all so lovely that I never want to leave when the summer is over. I am excited to sponsor Danielle de Niese in the Martin Theatre on August 4th; I anticipate it to be a wonderful performance!

Sue & Tom Pick
Ravinia, to Tom and me, means summer memories that go back over half a century, starting with romantic picnics on the lawn when we were dating. Early years of marriage and being the youngest member of the Women’s Board, seeing our four kids work as wait staff and ushers, giving a memorial concert dedicated to Tom’s mother, and in recent years, an annual get-together for our Sanibel/Chicago friends. But it’s really all about the music!
Ravinia expresses its most sincere gratitude to the 2016 Annual Fund contributors. These donors supply vital operating support for Ravinia’s Reach “Teach” Play education programs, as well as the beautification of the festival grounds and the reasonable ticket prices that Ravinia patrons have come to know. The names listed below represent those donors who contributed $1,000 or more during the period between October 1, 2014, and July 15, 2016. Please note that subsequent gifts will be recognized in later editions. A degree symbol (°) represents Silver Circle members, those who have supported Ravinia for 25 consecutive years or more. A plus sign (+) indicates new donors or donors who increased their contributions by $500 or more.

Prior to the summer season, Ravinia hosts two major events that raise funds for the festival’s Reach*Teach*Play education programs: the Music Matters Benefit, a project of the Ravinia Associates Board, and the Reach for the Stars Golf Outing, a project of the Ravinia Board of Trustees. Held at the Radisson Blu Aqua Hotel on May 7, 2016, the 24th annual Music Matters benefit grossed over $625,000. The evening included cocktails, live music, dinner, an auction, and a special tribute to Dolores Kohl Kaplan in honor of her lifelong dedication to music education. The 17th annual Reach for the Stars Golf Outing was held on May 23, 2016, at Northmoor Country Club and raised over $200,000. Ravinia would like to thank the following sponsors for supporting these events.

Ravinia Women’s Board

The Ravinia Women’s Board, founded in 1962, has raised over $29 million for Ravinia throughout the past 55 years. Major fundraisers include the annual summer Gala, Ravinia Gifts and Chair Rental, the Tribute Fund, and the Ravinia Cruise. Proceeds from these fundraising efforts help support Ravinia and its Reach*Teach*Play music education programs, which serve 75,000 people throughout the Chicago area. We are especially proud of the creation of the Sistema Ravinia student orchestra program, based on Venezuela’s acclaimed El Sistema model, which fosters positive social development through exceptional music training.

NO SMOKING
Ravinia is a smoke-free environment. Designated smoking areas are located outside the entrance gates. Use of electronic cigarettes or vapor devices is also limited to these areas.

MEDICAL AID
A nurse and physician are on duty at every performance. Contact the nearest usher in the event of a medical emergency.

LOST AND FOUND
Call 847-266-5100.

QUIET LISTENING
We request that all audience members refrain from talking during the concert and avoid making other disturbing sounds. If you are wearing an alarm wristwatch or carrying an electronic paging device or cellular phone, please turn it off before the performance.

CHILDREN
Children ages 6 and under are not allowed in the Pavilion, Martin Theatre, or Bennett Gordon Hall, except for Kids Concerts and designated family programs. Ravinia requires parental supervision of all children attending the festival.

AQUATIC SCULPTURE
We hope you enjoy the aquatic sculpture at Ravinia’s grand entrance—it was designed by WET, the artists behind the Bellagio’s dancing fountains—but please refrain from tossing coins into it, as they may damage this brand-new water feature.

PROHIBITED ITEMS
We want you to feel at home at Ravinia, but please do not bring the following into the park: grills; beer kegs; athletic equipment (e.g., footballs, flying discs); bicycles, scooters, and skates (bike racks are located outside the box office); pets (service animals are permitted); tents or canopies of any size; umbrellas over six feet in diameter; anything that needs to be staked into the ground; personal stereos; drones or other flying apparatus; and weapons.

SECURITY PROCEDURES
Firearms and explosives are prohibited at Ravinia. For your safety and the safety of all our guests, all items brought into the park (including, without limitation, coolers, picnic baskets, bags, backpacks, and purses) are subject to search upon entry or reentry into the park and may also be inspected again upon entering the Pavilion. A metal-detection wand may be used to scan patrons. Patrons who choose not to subject themselves to-wanding or their personal belongings to a security search will not be permitted to enter the park or the Pavilion.

CAMERAS AND RECORDERS
Photographic and video or audio recording equipment is strictly prohibited at all Ravinia events and may not be brought into any facility or used at any performance.

TICKETS
Tickets may be ordered by phone at 847-266-5100 or online exclusively at Ravinia.org. Daily box office hours are posted online. If you are unable to use your tickets, please consider donating them to the festival for resale. Ticket donations may be made in person or by phone up until the time of the performance. You will be e-mailed a receipt for the tax-deductible donation.

GROUP SALES
A discount of 20 percent on Pavilion tickets is available for groups of 20 or more for select concerts. Call the Group Sales Department at 847-266-5087 for more information.

SELLOUT POLICY
To ensure audience comfort at all Ravinia concerts, walk-up sales will not be made on evenings of concerts that are sold out. To check the status of a concert, call the box office at 847-266-5100 or visit Ravinia.org. Please note that one-time-use lawn passes are not valid on sold-out evenings.

$10 BGH CLASSICS SERIES
Tickets to the $10 BGH Classics series are not valid for entry to any other events held on the same dates. Those exiting BGH into the park may be asked to show their separate concert tickets. Please note that these tickets often sell out in advance of the concert date. BGH concerts are not broadcast to the lawn.

CHAIR AND TABLE RENTAL
Lawn chairs and tables are available for rental from the Ravinia Chair Rental tent on all Pavilion and Martin Theatre concert evenings. Visit Ravinia.org/Page/ChairRental/ for more information.

RESTAURANTS AND PICNICS
Reservations for Ravinia’s Park View and Mirabelle restaurants can be made online through OpenTable or by calling 847-432-7550. Guests are also encouraged to bring their own picnics or build them at the Ravinia Market or Char Bar outdoor bar and grill; however, beer kegs and grills may not be brought into the park. Food and beverages are not allowed in Bennett Gordon Hall, the Martin Theatre, or the Pavilion (except on designated nights). Picnic baskets may be left in the rear of the Pavilion.

DROP-OFFS
Patrons’ cars, taxis, limos, and ride-share services must comply with drop-off policies. Please alert your driver. On most nights, patrons can be dropped off at the following locations; a valid donor parking pass or handicap parking permit must be presented for access to Ravinia’s north and south lots.

- Ravinia’s west, north, and south parking lots (inbound access is closed 30 minutes before the performance ends and resumes 1 hour after the performance)
- Braeside Metra station (½ mile away)
- Ravinia Metra station (½ mile away)

However, Highland Park Police and Ravinia staff may need to redirect for various reasons. Please follow their instructions. No drop-offs are allowed on public streets; violators may be subject to fines from Highland Park Police.

NO STREET PARKING
Please remember that Ravinia is located within a residential neighborhood, so please keep noise to a minimum while exiting and driving safely. Parking on the residential streets surrounding Ravinia is strictly prohibited. Highland Park Police will issue $100 fines to violators.

PARK AND RIDE
Ravinia’s free and handicapped-accessible shuttle bus service makes continuous round trips between Ravinia and its off-site parking lots before, during, and after Pavilion concerts, and is frequently the fastest way in and out of the park.

WEATHER
Concerts take place rain or shine. To check the National Weather Service forecast for the Ravinia area, visit crh.noaa.gov or link from Ravinia’s homepage. Ravinia is an open-air venue that cannot guarantee refuge to patrons in the event of severe weather. Guests are asked to be aware of their surroundings. Ravinia may delay the start, interrupt, or even cancel a concert if an emergency situation occurs. Updates will be provided when possible over the public-address system, by e-mail, and on video kiosks located near the park entrances and restrooms. Refunds are not given due to weather unless a concert is canceled in its entirety, with no replacement performance scheduled.

CHECK RAVINIA’S WEBSITE!
The complete concert schedule—including ticket prices, gate and start times, and other information—as well as box office hours, directions, weather, park map, special offers, and more are all at Ravinia.org.
Having spent most of my impressionable culinary upbringing in sunny California, there’s no better dish on a hot summer day to me than perfectly chilled, raw fish. Whether it be a nice big platter of oysters on the half shell, a variety of fresh sushi rolls, or a perfectly prepped tartare, if you pair it with an ice-cold beer and the warm summer sun, I’m a happy guy.

For most at-home cooks, raw fish is not a common ingredient. While the past 10 years have gotten the world more comfortable with the idea of eating raw fish as sushi restaurants have swept the nation, most people are still wary of prepping it themselves. I’ve seen so many people standing at the fish counter and eyeing that “sushi-grade tuna.” I can hear them thinking, “Is raw fish really safe to eat?”

Firstly, it is important you find your fish from the best market available to you. Yes, it will be more costly, but you will taste the difference in every morsel, especially with the knowledge that you did your homework and can trust your source. Find a local fishmonger and make sure he knows you intend to eat it raw.

Believe it or not, the best fish for raw prep has been previously frozen. I know it seems backward and that the common wisdom “the fresher, the better” is echoing in your head, but freezing fish ensures the complete elimination of any potential parasites. Since fish live in relatively cold water, simple refrigeration may be the temperature of their natural environment, so if they brought any tiny friends with them out of the water, we need to make sure they are wiped out completely.

Again, if you source your fish properly, you should have no fear. A good fishmonger will have kept any fish that has the potential to be eaten raw frozen for at least seven days. So while I don’t suggest banning raw fish from your kitchens, I do suggest understanding the risks to ensure smart shopping.

Cheers!

Looney Tunes and Rossini, Too

By Jack Zimmerman

A couple of decades ago, I attended a series of concerts that consisted solely of symphonic works by Sibelius—I’ve always loved his symphonies, and I’m big on his other works, too. But spending several hours with all that Finnish introspection and darkness made me yearn for sunshine and springtime. More than anything, I wanted to hear something that wasn’t transformative, life-affirming, or emotionally searing, but something that was just fun to listen to.

It was after that experience that I began classifying composers into two groups: (1) composers who, for the most part, are deeply philosophical, whose music makes us ponder life, its mysteries, and our own mortality—Mahler, Bruckner, Wagner—and (2) composers whose music delights us and makes us smile and feel like a bunch of schoolkids on the first day of summer vacation. Much of Mendelssohn’s music does this for me. So do the works of Johann Strauss Jr., most of Mozart and Haydn, and practically all of Handel. And then there’s the 20th-century French composers; their music’s filled with Gallic wit and charm.

Of course, most composers are somewhere between these opposite poles. Sure, Beethoven is profound and life-affirming, but there are plenty of moments in his music that speak to the inner kid in all of us.

The one composer whose music never fails to lift and cheer me is Rossini. He’s the ultimate musical optimist. The guy has a knack for writing delightful melodies and instilling mirth and vitality in everything he touches. If you’ve ever listened through his Barber of Seville or Cinderella, you know the guy’s a fountain of lightness and joy. His music’s filled with engaging rhythms, catchy tunes, florid arias, and colorful orchestration, and it all seems as if its creation was effortless.

Rossini’s father was a horn player who got tossed in the clink more than once for his politics, and his mother was a singer who performed lesser roles in lesser opera houses. At age 12, Rossini made his operatic debut, singing a small part in a long-forgotten opera in Bologna. By that time he had composed several songs and could play harpsichord, horn, and viola.

At 24, Rossini wrote the greatest comic opera of all time, The Barber of Seville, which premiered in 1816. It’s hard to believe that it’s 200 years old and still so funny.

Plenty of other bits of classical music are celebrated in pop culture—Richard Strauss’s Also sprach Zarathustra in Stanley Kubrick’s 2001: A Space Odyssey and Wagner’s “Ride of the Valkyries” in Apocalypse Now are two omnipresent examples. But it’s Rossini’s entire Overture to The Barber of Seville that’s used as the basis for the famed 1950 Bugs Bunny cartoon classic, The Rabbit of Seville. Directed by the legendary Chuck Jones and written by Michael Maltese, the Warner Bros. Looney Tunes feature is considered one of the greatest animated works of all time.

Rossini was dead for 82 years before Bugs and Elmer Fudd stepped into his opera, and yet his music is perfectly suited for their seven-and-a-half minute romp. Could a composer ask for anything more, writing the greatest comic opera of all time and then having the overture forever linked to such legendary comic characters? That’s more impressive than getting a Grammy, Pulitzer, and Kennedy Center Honor all at once.

The Rabbit of Seville has been viewed on screens of many sizes for decades, but if you want to see it (and hear it) under the best conditions, now’s your chance. On Sunday, September 11, George Daugherty conducts the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra at Ravinia in a program titled Bugs Bunny at the Symphony II. The Rabbit of Seville and What’s Opera, Doc? will be shown—along with a host of other famous shorts—on the festival’s Pavilion and lawn screens while the scores are played live. Bugs Bunny, Elmer Fudd, and Ginochino Rossini together at Ravinia. That’s quite a show.
